Anthony G. Baxter , Ph.D. (1960-1961)

BACKGROUND: Dr. Anthony G. Baxter had a rough start early in life; he became an alcoholic during his high school years and continued drinking and being incarcerated until he underwent rehabilitation in 1971. Celebrating his 42nd year of sobriety in 2013, Dr. Baxter “gives back what others so graciously gave to me” by informally counseling those who are struggling with substance abuse.

EDUCATION: Failing to graduate from Reading High School with his class, the Class of 1964, because he was incarcerated, Dr. Baxter earned his GED at Reading High School Evening Division in 1967. He migrated to San Francisco in 1973, where he worked as an independent trucker and then as a journeyman welder. In 1980, Dr. Baxter returned to school and earned his A.A. in Mathematics from San Francisco City College, graduating with honors. After graduating magna cum laude from San Francisco State in 1982, earning his B.A. degree in Psychology, Dr. Baxter won scholarships for advanced graduate study at Harvard University where he earned his M.Ed. in Counseling and Consulting Psychology, and later at Stanford University where he earned his Ph.D. in Educational Psychology.

WORK EXPERIENCE: As a Professor at Boston University, Dr. Baxter created innovative approaches to the reform of Chelsea Schools, the first time in the nation when a university took over a public-school district. As a consulting psychologist in the Boston Public Schools, Dr. Baxter worked successfully to increase the number of minority students in the District’s A+ gifted and talented program. As a professor, Dr. Baxter collaborated with the Regional Education Lab at Brown University to reform Boston Public Schools’ Cluster 7 which UMass Boston had adopted as an Educational Laboratory to study school reform. As a professor of education, Dr. Baxter taught research design and methods, measurement science, and statistics courses in UMass Boston’s doctoral program in Urban School Leadership.

ACHIEVEMENTS: A member of the American Psychological Association, the American Educational Research Association, and Psi-Chi, the national honor society in psychology, Dr. Baxter has published and presented his research on the history of African American education, improving the preparation and development of school teachers, the role of the Civil Rights Movement in American education, and improving the education of African American students. As a program evaluator, Dr. Baxter has delivered scores of comprehensive reports that document the impact of intervention on school programs and school reform outcomes to local, regional, and national education agencies.

ANGELO DI MARIA attended Southern Junior High School from 1963 to 1965.

Angelo was born in Delia, Sicily in 1947 to Francisco and Giuseppe Di Maria. He arrived in the Reading School District as a non-English speaking student. His interest in sculpting began at the early age of six while growing up in Italy. Today, with 48 years of experience in sculpting a variety of subjects from the human form to wildlife, and from logos to facades, Angelo has developed and perfected a unique process for the colors and textures used in his art. His ability to capture expressions of the human face portrays his natural talent. Here are only a few examples of Angelo's completed sculptures:

- Joe Paterno's 7 ft. bronze statue with four football players in the background, placed on the East Side of Beaver Stadium at Penn State's Main Campus in State College, PA.
- 6 ft. Bronze statue of the Penn State Nittany Lion Mascot, located inside the new Sports Museum at the Main Campus in State College, PA.
- 20 ft. Crucifix commissioned by St. John Neumann Church in Annapolis, Maryland.
- Life size 5ft. statue of St. John Neumann, located at the front entrance of the church in Annapolis, MD.
- Bust of St. John Paul II commissioned by St. Catharine Church, Exeter Township.
- Life Size bust of Jack Gulati, owner of Stokesay Castle in Reading, PA.
- Medallion for Post Precision Casting in Strausstown, PA.
- Restored Bronze statues at Berks County Heritage Center, featuring a weeping police officer and a German Shepherd police dog, in memory of fallen police officers and fallen members of the K-9 Unit.

Angelo was honored by the Berks Arts Council with the Pagoda Award in 2008. He is also an accomplished musician who plays with several bands in the community.

ROSANNE SPOLSKI, Ph.D. attended Southern Junior High School from 1967 to 1970.

I graduated from Reading High School in 1973, and still have vivid memories today of giving the salutatory address at our commencement ceremony. Influenced by my science teachers at both Reading High and Southern, I developed an interest in science and medicine. No one in my family had ever attended college, but I was encouraged by my guidance counselor to apply. Thankfully, I followed that advice and obtained my bachelor's degree in 1977 at Bryn Mawr College, where I majored in Biology. In 1985, I earned my Ph.D. in Biology at Brandeis University, where I became immersed in developmental biology and immunology. With funding from the Cancer Research Institute and Leukemia Society, I did postdoctoral research in immunology at the Ontario Cancer Institute in Toronto.

I became a faculty member at Wake Forest University in 1988, where I was funded by the NIH to carry out research directed at understanding parasite-host immune interactions. At that time, I taught both undergraduate and graduate courses in molecular biology and immunology.

In 1999, I moved to the National Institutes of Health so that I could focus primarily on immunological research as a staff scientist. My research program has focused on a study of the function of the cytokine interleukin-21 in the regulation of immune responses. Interleukin-21 has turned out to be a major player in the control of anti-tumor immunity and is used clinically in the treatment of melanoma and renal carcinoma. We have also identified it as a key player in the development of the autoimmune response of type I diabetes, as well as other autoimmune responses. Our research continues to try to understand how to control these diverse actions of IL-21.

I have authored 81 scientific publications, and hold a number of patents on the use of IL-21 in immune regulation. I am a member of the American Association of Immunology, and have served as a study section member for the review of NIH Autoimmunity Centers of Excellence Grants. We have also received NIH awards for our work on IL-21.

More importantly, my daughters have thrived, and continue to delight and inspire me. Sarah is a union organizer in Pittsburgh, Skye is a graduate student at Harvard, and Marina has just started medical school in Virginia. Life is good.

RICHARD CARPENTER

Richard attended Southern Middle School from 1990 to 1993, and graduated with the Reading High School Class of 1997; but well before graduation, he started his work life at the Reading Farmers Market on Penn Street, where he learned how to “butcher” in the meat shop. Richard worked in this trade for several years as a teenager, and at the age of 18, he was hired as the meat manager for BJ’s Wholesale Club. Richard continued to work his way up the ladder at BJ’s, and eventually became their youngest General Manager.

In 2007, Richard founded Axxess Mechanical at the age of 28 with only five employees. Today, he is the President and CEO of Axxess Industries, which is currently celebrating its 12th anniversary in business. Richard now oversees more than sixty employees who perform various trades throughout the United States, including pipefitting, welding, rigging, electrical work, and general labor.

Richard is also deeply committed to community service. He is a member of the Board of Directors for New Journey Community Outreach (NJCO), a group which provides a daily soup kitchen, a weekly food pantry, and a weekly clothes closet for low income families located on South 6th Street. This past June, Richard co-sponsored a golf fundraiser that raised over $6000 for NJCO; last December, Richard responded without hesitation to NJCO’s desperate request for winter clothing by purchasing over 100 much needed items, including coats, hats, scarfs, gloves, and blankets; and each year, Richard has continued to provide financial support and volunteers from Axxess Electrical to help with Reading’s “Christmas on the Mountain”, a holiday tradition that also benefits the Reading High School Junior ROTC Program.

Richard currently lives in the Leesport area with his wife, Valerie, and daughter, Caitlin, age 5.

ARLENE E. (WENRICH) CLEAVER – Posthumous

Arlene was born in Reading, PA, to a proud veteran of the Spanish-American War; she attended Southern Junior High from 1933 to 1936, and graduated from Reading Senior High School in 1939. Arlene was married for 59 years to Edward J. Cleaver, a WWII veteran; and was the mother of daughter, Claire. She devoted her career to advocating for the men and women who served our country in the Armed Forces and the Pennsylvania National Guard. In January, 1956, she joined the Department of Veterans Affairs of Berks County, and five years later, became Director of the department. As one of the first women to head a Veteran’s Department, Arlene broke barriers for other women. She served 34 years in her position, while also serving as Treasurer of the Eastern Region of Directors for 27 years; and the State Treasurer of Directors for 20 years.

Prior to her position in the Berks County Court House, Arlene was employed during WWII as a knitter’s helper at Berkshire Knitting Mills. Later, she held other positions as a secretary-treasurer, as an independent sales rep for housewares, and as the owner-operator of a food-service stand at the Reading Farmers’ Market. It was, however, her lifelong dedication to the military that kept her active, even after retirement. Arlene continued to attend meetings and conventions, and to deliver speeches on topics affecting U.S. veterans and their families. In recognition of her achievements and leadership, Arlene received Special Recognition in Berks County’s Military Hall of Fame in November, 2014; and her passing in 2015 received condolences in the form of a Pennsylvania Senate Proclamation.

Arlene was an avid traveler, cook, seamstress, and card player; and a tireless volunteer for numerous charitable associations and organizations, frequently holding office. She was a life member of the Max Schaeffer VFW Post 6558; American Legion, Greg Post 212; and Women of the Moose, Chapter 381 (Star Recorder 1955-1960, Deputy Grand Regent 1959-1960). Arlene was also a life member of the Southern Junior High School Alumni Association and 60-year member of Holy Guardian Angels Church, Hyde Park.
